

Who is FarmLink?

FarmLink is made up of growers, advisers and researchers in southern NSW.

FarmLink gives growers the power to influence research priorities and be actively involved in the research process.

FarmLink seeks funding to address priority research issues nominated by growers, ensuring grower levies are used to fund projects relevant to our farming systems. Current research priorities include maximising water use efficiency, managing subsoil constraints, managing canola yield decline and stubble management.

As well as co-ordinating projects, FarmLink's major objective is to communicate project results and other relevant information to members in a concise and timely manner throughout the season via newsletters, field days, seminars and the website.
